Nosey Facts:

What's your news story? Is it about a crime, a good deed, a weather alert, politics or a funky food in the cafeteria? Maybe you've just solved a mystery that has haunted your school for years?

Now, before you start writing—know your facts! Think about the news you'll be reporting. Explore your local newspaper for examples of news stories. Then write the key points about your news below. Remember, it's important to use lots of detail and interview anyone who may be helpful to your story.
